STATE NEWS.

Androscoggin.

The funeral services of the late Thomas W. Kenaida, Esq., were attended, Tuesday afternoon, by the agents of the various corporations in Lewiston, without exception, besides a great body of friends and business associates of the deceased. The services were held at the residence on Bates street, the house being filled. The services were conducted by Rev. W. H. Washburn, rector of Trinity church. The musical service of the Episcopalian church was sung by the Lewiston Mendelssohn quintette. The remains were viewed where they lay in one of the parlors of the house. Mrs. Duckworth, eldest daughter of the late Mr. Kenaida, preceded the remains to Lawrence, Mass., where they will be interred with additional services. The services at the residence of the late Mr. Kenaida, as conducted by Rev. Mr. Washburn, were peculiarly impressive.

Aroostook.

Eight years ago, Mr. Rutherford A. Sullis, a young man just married, bought a farm near Presque Isle, for $1,000. There were no buildings on the farm. Young Smith has paid off the entire amount, paying ten per cent. interest and went to work. In eight years he has supported his family, now consisting of a wife and three children, paid the entire amount of his indebtedness with interest, built a good, substantial house, barn, and out-buildings, and last Monday sold his farm, stock, farming tools, etc., to Charles Turbell for $1,021, and still has about $400 worth of produce on hand.

Cumberland.

While there is an immense number of bets pending in Portland on the result of the election, they are chiefly below $100 in amount. There is probably but a single bet that exceeds $1,000, and only a few that approach that sum.

A young woman in Portland, giving the name of Mattie Roche, from Quebec, was abandoned, Monday, by her young husband who left for Boston, as she believes, with another woman. Roche took the trunk containing his wife's wardrobe. Mrs. Roche sold her jewelry in order to obtain money to return home. She has been married only three months.

An adjourned meeting of the Portland Trust Company was held this day but little work for the election of officers was performed, to be postponed until five days hence. Only a part of the fifteen trustees were present and the following officers were unanimously elected: President, Hanson J. Libby; Vice President, William E. Gould; Secretary, Harry Butler; Executive Committee, Hanson J. Libby, William E. Gould, Mark P. Emery, Philip Henry Brown, William E. Gould. In a few weeks the company, managed by some of the strongest business men and capitalists in the State, will open its doors. The unparalleled growth of trust companies in other cities, and the universal favor in which they are held, is well known. It is believed this company will prove an exception to the rule, and will become as great a benefit to the city and State as to the stockholders.

Franklin.

Way up in the northeast corner of Franklin county, in the plantation of Eustis, is a postoffice known as Stratton. Here is a pretty little Methodist church located, the only one for miles around in any direction. The citizens, with slight help from the Methodist Conference, support a preacher regularly, the preacher being Rev. William Condon. If some of our city clergymen had to perform the work of this man they would feel as though they needed a vacation as often as every other Sunday. Mr. Condon preaches three times every Sabbath besides conducting a Sabbath School, and holds meetings in the adjacent neighborhoods every evening in the week. Then of course he has to attend many funerals, not to speak of weddings, and pastoral calls. He also has a farm where he puts in his spare time. He is an earnest, forcible speaker and very naturally is very popular. A sweetened pail, the gift of Gen. J. Murch ster Haynes, calls the people to worship.

Knox.

The Steamer Katahdin took from Camden on a recent trip a shipment of apples, marked E. A. True, Liverpool, England. Col. True was at one time Colonel of the Eighth Maine Regiment. His native place was Hope. He is now in business in Liverpool, England.

Rockland will be well represented at the New Orleans exposition. H. H. Monroe and Maynard Sumner are having made at F. L. Cummings's carriage manufactory a pair of Monroe's patent rotary harrows of the latest improved patterns as used so extensively in the west where Mr. Monroe has introduced them. These two harrows will be shipped direct to New Orleans where they will be exhibited.

Oxford.

Mrs. M. A. Briggs, a well known dressmaker of Norway, received severe injuries by falling down the cellar stairs the past week. Her brain and spine were badly hurt producing paralysis of the right side, also a serious disturbance of the right hip joint.

Mr. George H. Watkins, who, for ten years past, has owned and published the Oxford Democrat, had made partial arrangements to sell out and engage in business in Portland. He announces that he has been persuaded by friends in Oxford county to abandon that project and continue his relations as editor and proprietor of the Democrat.

Somerset.

It is said that a bank cashier at Bath who is an enthusiastic Democrat, celebrated the Democratic victory by painting his dog red, and driving through the street with the red dog following behind bearing a Cleveland flag in his mouth. This is probably a substitute for painting the town red.

Mrs. Jane Hoxie, the oldest woman in Skowhegan, died last week, aged ninety-five years. She had lived there sixty-four years.

Washington.

Rev. F. E. Shaw and family left East Machias last Wednesday. It is understood that Mr. Shaw is to preach in Brewer and Orrington. The Society at East Machias is left without a pastor.

Gilbert Day, of Weston, went to Machias, last week, with a large, valuable horse. The horse was apparently well when fed at night, but was dead when found in the morning.

The stables of A. J. Nash, at Addison Point, was entered the night of Nov. 4th, and his team, consisting of horse, carriage, etc., was stolen. 'Tis said that the team has been seen passing through Milbridge and Ellsworth.

Mr. A. W. Lamson, of Lubec, lost a number of his boat last Saturday night, valued at $200, containing four hogsheads of herring; she broke from her moorings and went ashore on Liberty Point and is a total loss; no insurance.

The buildings owned and occupied by Capt. A. W. Ackley, of Cutler, were burned, Nov. 6th, together with all of his crops of potatoes, hay, etc., and also all of his catch of the fall season, which were stored in his shed. No insurance. The fire took from a lantern accidentally broken in the hand by one of the family while feeding the stock. The most of the furniture was saved.

Beef has become a drug in Calais market, and is selling at prices ranging from four to seven cents. Nice mutton commands a fair price. The price of butter has declined during the past week. Producers in Washington county, but not in quality. They are rotting rapidly. Turnips are now.

Wm. McEleavy and John B. Cleary, of Whitneyville, have contracted to cut three millions or more of lumber in New Hampshire the coming winter. Their camps are on the Androscoggin river which empties into the Connecticut river. They will have twenty horses and eight oxen when fully equipped and forty of men corresponding. Some of the best woodsmen have already gone to the camp. They operate for Charles T. Payson, of Portland.

Lewey Francis, the newly elected governor of the Passamaquoddy Indians, is determined that his Indians shall be conducted according to law, says the Calais Times. He has had a code of 10 by-laws drawn up and read to the Indians of Pleasant Point. They provide the election of officers, the penalties annexed, and the duties of the several officers. The by-laws are read in English and Indian, and the Indians are required to assent to them. The preservation of public peace and good order, the prosecution of liquor sellers, whether white men or Indians, and the enforcement of the Sunday laws. Gambling, bowling and ball playing are not allowed out of doors after nine o'clock in the evening; no person shall sell or give liquor to women or children, and no married woman shall entertain company or give any party during her husband's absence from home. Eight fines are named for violation of the liquor laws, and if these fines are not paid the guilty parties are to take their chances up on the Maine law.

Penobscot.

Penobscot is probably no worse off for cider than it has suffered from other liquors, the loss of not even more than Nos. 3 or 4 Coal per cent. Interest and went to work. In eight years he has supported his family, now consisting of a wife and three children, paid the entire amount of his indebtedness with interest, built a good, substantial house, barn, and out-buildings, and last Monday sold his farm, stock, farming tools, etc., to Charles Turbell for $1,021, and still has about $400 worth of produce on hand.

Piscataquis.

The will of Hollis Monroe, late of Boston, recently filed in the Suffolk county Probate Court, gives the following public bequests. To the Maine General Hospital at Portland, Me., for free beds, $2,500; The Maine Congregational Missionary Society, $2,500. Methodist aged and infirm ministers in Maine, $1,000. Methodist Missionary Society, $3,000. Methodist Episcopal church, Dover, N. H., $1,000. Methodist Episcopal church, Foxcroft, Me., $1,000. Ladies' Home, Portland, Me., $500. Congregational church, Lowell Village, Me., $500. Congregational church, South Paris, Me., $1,000; Methodist Episcopal church, same place, $500. Congregational church, Norway, Me., $500. Congregational church, Cooper's Mills, Oxford County, Me., $500. Methodist Episcopal church, same place, $500. Congregational church, Norway, Me., $500. Maine Home Missionary Society, $2,000. Large sums are given to other religious and charitable societies. These and other legacies are to be paid in full, but in case the estate should not be sufficient to pay the public bequests in full, they are to share pro rata, and in case there should be a surplus after paying the above legacies, it is to be paid to Rev. E. K. Alden at the Congregational House, Boston, to be applied to charitable purposes in such ways as he deems best.

THE SUZZENAC WENT TO THE BOTTOM.

Then came another sea the mainmast snapped, and a moment later was pounding against the side in a network of tangled rigging. The crew hung on with desperate strength, for every man's life depended on his grip. The worst had not yet come, but the doomed sailors had little time to wait. Presently a sea, heavier than all before it, buried the vessel and its crew. When it passed over the deck laid of little was gone, and with it had gone nearly every man on board. Amid the tangle of rigging and spars, however, all but one was crowded together on the deck. That one was the colored cook, Wilfred Robinson, a native of Barbadoes. He was not seen again.

Noon had come. By this time the forecast had also gone, and the Vigilant was a mere hulk. The tide, rising, had driven the vessel along the bar near the beach, and she lay broadside to the wind and sea. Her fine hull lay deep under water, and the hands were clinging for safety to the chain plates on the weather side. While in this situation a crew of seas came in, lifted the vessel as it would lift a log, and turned it bottom up.

When the foremast went by the board, it took with it the forward house, through which it ran. This floated alongside, and to it the nearly dead sailors clung for life. As they climbed on it, it began to sink. The light-boarded frame work would not sustain all hands. Darkness was then coming on, and something must be done. Captain Chase saw some deck plank still hanging together, which had been torn from the vessel and determined to test it to ascertain if it were a better place of refuge than the deck-house. With this intention he plunged into the water to swim to the floating object, but on the way his feet became entangled in the half sunken rigging, and he struggled with the energy of one who knows his life hung on his efforts. He appeared to be exhausted, when his son, a lad of seventeen, jumped into the angry sea.

TO SAVE HIS FATHER'S LIFE!

The poor lad had forgotten everything save that his father was ready to perish. He had not stopped to think how small he was to battle with that fearful sea, but urged by the mighty impulse he dashed in. What he dared everything in his footsteps. A moment after he plunged in the water was seen no more. He had gone to his death beneath the waters.

The sight of his boy perishing before his eyes unnerved Captain Chase for the moment. He found himself on the floating raft, and the fragment of wreck. He was followed by the mate and a Portuguese sailor. The other remained clinging to the forward house.

All night long the crew clung to their frail supports. The wind abated with the dawn, but the seas increased in a cold, sleet like. A sharp frost followed, and the wretched men, wet and exhausted, began to feel the keenest suffering from cold. Anxiously they waited and watched for sunrise, but before it came Daniel McKenzie gave way to struggle for life and lay dead.

DEAD FROM EXHAUSTION AND COLD.

He belonged to Douglastown, Miramichi, and had taken passage from Bathurst to Boston. The sun scarcely dispelled the darkness when Chase discovered that the body of the unfortunate Portuguese was missing. Exhausted by cold and hunger, he had given up the struggle for life and lay down to die. Before he did so he managed to tell Chase that he was going, and begged him to remember his wife and children. Then he, too, was gone.

Daylight came at last, clear and cold, with a heavy swell still running. Those of the inhabitants on the shore who rose early saw all that was left of the vessel, a hull, had come to anchor off the mouth of the bay, and clinging to the fragments of the wreck were the remnant of her crew. As soon as was the remnant of her crew. As soon as was the remnant of her crew. As soon as was

The Good Sense of the People.

It is gratifying to note how rapidly the cloud of demagogism and blustering is subsided, and how sensibly and quietly the people at large recognize the duty of waiting the proper and conclusive determination of the result of the Presidential election. While a few excitable and unbalanced persons have been making themselves red in the face with shouting that Cleveland is already elected, the operations of the lawful agencies for ascertaining the effect of the people's voting have quietly began and deceorously gone on, bringing us nearer and nearer to that final result.

Already a very large number of errors have been discovered and corrected, and the Cleveland orgies which claim that they have not been unfavorable to them candidate ought to be better pleased with the official count than they seemed to be when the Republicans insisted that it would be more authoritative than the figures of the Democratic committee. Certainly enough errors have already been found to show the absurdity of deciding the political and newspaper estimates for a week.

The despatches yesterday afternoon reported corrections in four New York city Assembly districts aggregating nearly three hundred in favor of Blaine, and the Republicans are in need of the full count.

The work is progressing steadily, and everybody ought to be anxious to have it done rightly and honestly done.

It is expected that the Republican counsel have important cases involving a large number of votes that will be brought before the canvassing boards and the Democrats are representing by counsel who will see that their party is protected in all its rights.

The people of the country are looking on anxiously, but most of them quietly, and they will be ready to accept and respect the decision of the voters of New York as honestly and lawfully ascertained.

Complexion of the Next House of Representatives.

Hon. Edward McPherson, Secretary of the Republican Congressional Committee, says that from the most authentic information he has been able to secure, the next House of Representatives will consist of 182 Democrats, 141 Republicans, one Greenbacker (Brumm of Pennsylvania), and one Fusionist, Weaver, of Iowa. As compared with the membership of the various parties in the present House, this estimate shows a loss of nineteen votes to the Democrats and four to the Independents, and a gain of twenty-two Republican and one Fusionist vote.

This classification is subject to a possible change of two or three votes. The election of Weaver, of Iowa, a Fusionist, with Democratic proclivities, is only inferred. That in two of the Tennessee districts is claimed by the Republicans, but positive information has not yet been received in either of them; and the fifth Wisconsin district is still in doubt, is conceded by this estimate to the Democrats. Mr. Post, secretary of the Democratic Congressional Committee is not now in Washington, but it is understood on information that has been received at the Democratic committee rooms which is not in accord with Mr. McPherson's table.

Let Democracy Stop Standing on its Head.

[From the Rochester Post Express.]

Upon a narrow margin, we not only say that Republicans would be foolish and weak to give it up before the official declaration, but we say frankly that we should do and do not expect our opponents themselves to do differently. This is only natural in the circumstances that both sides should persist in their claims, and that neither should back down until the thing is finally settled.

Again we say to our Democratic friends, don't be silly. If you have won the election by one vote you shall have it without any attempt at conspiring to hinder you entering into peaceable possession of the fruits of your victory. Good Republicans are, everywhere and always, good citizens, and they will accept defeat with becoming philosophy. Meantime it should turn out that you have been successful, and that your party is about to enter upon the great responsibility of administering the government, we take leave to suggest the importance of establishing in the popular mind something like confidence in its firmness and capacity. The longer the party keeps stumbling on its leading less confidence people will have in its wisdom and its ability to administer the important trust committed to it.

Confident of Blaine's Election.

A Washington despatch referring to the official canvass in New York says it has been discovered that some 2,000 Blaine votes had been rejected because the first letter of the name of one of the electors, Butterfield, had been cut off in the manufacture to trim the ballots, and that the Republicans would insist that these votes should be counted. Assistant Secretary Joslyn received information from Democratic authority in New York that the partial recount of the ballots cast in New York county has disclosed a fraudulent Democratic trick which will give Blaine at least 1,500 more votes than the County Democracy is claiming for the State. Identifying and furnishing the ballots they say is positive proof that the tickets they voted, headed "Democratic ticket" and containing the names of Grace for Mayor and Blaine Presidential Electors, were all thrown out. "My information tells me," said Judge Joslyn, "that if the Board of Canvassers ever call for the counting of the ballots in the County of New York it will be proven elected as sure as fate, as he knows of his own knowledge that more than 5,000 of these Grace-Blaine ballots were cast by the County Democracy. John Kelly is clamoring for the production of these ballots, as are the Tammany delegates from them. I believe that great fraud will be unearthed and that Blaine will be shown to have a large and decided majority in New York. My opinion truly is a responsible Democrat."

Secretary McPherson said to-day, "Our people in New York claim that we have the State. I think we have it, too. I will never admit that the State is Democratic until the National Committee hauls down its flag. Till then I will believe that Blaine will be our next President."

The Commercial is tickled almost to death because the World commended the Democratic paraders for behavior respectably Wednesday evening. From the exultation manifested by our contemporary over our tribute to the orderly character of the demonstration one would infer that it was as much of a surprise to our contemporary as to other people.

THE VIRGINIA FRAUDS.

HOW THEY WERE WORKED.

[Special to the Chicago Inter-Ocean.]

PETERSBURG, Va., Nov. 7. The Democrats have stolen Virginia by a series of frauds heretofore unknown outside of the Gulf States. Under the State law, the county judges appoint the judges of election, three for each precinct, in the strong Republican counties of Charlotte and Halifax the county judges elected by the Readjusters, two years ago went with the Democrats and appointed two Democratic judges and one Republican for each precinct. Under the law each political party has to be given representatives in each election board. In the Democratic county judges so elected this year by Readjuster votes appointing as the Republican member either a negro who could not either read or write or else some hybrid Republican who could be bought. In this way election boards were thrust upon the Republican counties of Charlotte and Halifax and others. With these judges and by the devices of to confuse ignorant and illiterate ballot holders, and by delay of United States supervisors access to the polling-rooms, either during the session or during the count afterward, the U. S. will say Republican majority was carried by 600 for the Democrat, Carl Charlotte, will 600 Republican majority was carried by seventy-five for the Democrats. The sleeping ballot-box was one frequently heard of, but exactly like the one so used during election day, and ballots put in in such quantities as Democrats desired. This was kept concealed in a valise in the polling-rooms, and after night, at the closing of the polls, substituted for the ballot-box used during the election, and the latter destroyed. In these and other counties the votes were received through with impunity that not even a pretense of secrecy was observed in the ballot-box. At Keysville the ballot-box was not sealed by any of the voters during the entire day. The United States supervisors were excluded also from the room.

Captain Gillam, a well-known Republican, who is one of the Republican leaders in Washington, does not vote in Virginia, but was at home to vote. He was not allowed to see the ballot-box when it was voted, and does not know whether his ballot was put in the box or thrown on the floor. He also found the United States supervisors refused admission to the counties in which the polls were located. In these of stealing ballot-boxes in favor of the products of these two counties, and defeating ballots in others, the Democrats gained over 2,500 votes, over one-half of the county majority in the State, which they now claim. Another of the counties negroes were forcibly intimidated and kept away from the polls by thousands.

Another method successfully employed was to delay the voters at the polls by many questions, and so preventing a number of negroes from voting in all. In the counties where there are many negroes and many Republicans counted out. In Jackson's ward 12 was employed that when the polls closed at 7 o'clock 300 colored men were in line to vote, and there were only 12 ballots ready to vote, and these were thrown out. These have been made affidavits to this effect, and the ballots are in the hands of United States Attorney Waddell. By this method of delay 5,000 colored men throughout the State were deprived of their vote.

Still another method was invoked by the Democrats. The Republican committee, examine the registry list and purge it of all names that they suspect. Hundreds of election officers, committees, and other officials, struck off thousands of names of colored men. The law requires that the registry be purged, but the commissioners in no case selected the names of negroes who were known to be voters absent from the precincts. The voters thus removed, it was claimed, did not vote at the election day. Thus was yet another precinct in which the Democrats had a majority of 600 reduced to a minority of 75. This was kept concealed up to the time the polls closed, and could not be counted in the State. This was yet another method employed in the counties of Hercules County over the State.

United States Attorney Waddell went to the county and tried to have the registry list purged, and appealed from the County Judge, but the Democratic Board refused to purge the list. Waddell went to Richmond and tried to have the Circuit Court to compel the Board to purge the list, but the Judge was a Democrat, and sustained the Board in refusing the voters. Republican reports show that nearly 3,000 voters were thus disfranchised in this county.

OTHER DEVICES OF DISHONESTY

and trickery were employed at different points, but those mentioned are the principal ones by which elected the Republican vote of at least 8,000 votes, and gained the Democratic majority of 2,500 in the State. Notwithstanding these gross frauds against 14,000 votes for Cleveland, the Democrats of the Republican State, when the polls closed on Tuesday last, were confident that the State had gone Democratic by a small majority. Even on Wednesday this feeling was universal, and the Democratic committee in Richmond had no doubt of the State by at least 1,000 majority.

Richmond would be the result in the State. The Democratic committee in Richmond virtually conducted the entire Senator Mahone, Colonel Brady, and all leading Republicans were defeated, and none of the Readjusters have been elected. Although telegraphing to New York that they pulled through. They have pulled through and destroyed the Republican majority gained at the polls.

Despite the 10,000 votes stolen by the Democrats as above described by holding back the returns in the counties, counties, stuffing in enough votes Wednesday to give them a majority to collect their votes. In the Republicans counted out of the 3,000 voters disfranchised through the so-called purging of the registry list could have stood the 5,000 votes stolen by the stuffing ballot boxes and keeping out negro voters, and could have stood also the Democratic vote of 2,500 stolen by the sleeping ballot boxes and the false ballots and still have carried the State. The Democrats saw this on Wednesday and couriers were despatched to the counties which could be manipulated with orders to steal 2,000 or 7,000 votes into the returns.

THE WORST REMAINS TO BE TOLD.

Before and during the election would not and did not give the Democrats success. The Republicans still had faith. Post election frauds were appealed to and by this desperate method they gained what they could not get by fraud at the polls. It is the burglary of a statesman. The thieves proposed to go and alter the stolen stock to the Electoral College, and expected to have them received and counted with those legally elected. Then Cleveland and President of the United States. The frauds have been so plain that the vote should never be counted in the Electoral College.

General Mahone, Colonel Brady, and the other Republican leaders have decided to fight for Virginia and will go to Washington victorious at the polls, despite of intimidation and fraud. The Democrats have decided that the State is theirs, and will be seen whether such frauds can be successful. The Democrats are jubilant over the thought that they have elected Cleveland, and are very confident in their actions. Many of them are saying that and that the days are at last here once more to stay. Others declare openly that not one of the men now in federal office in Virginia or who have held such office can hereafter live in the State. Many Democrats say that if Cleveland is elected they will be compelled to leave Virginia.

A mob of jubilating Democrats in Richmond yesterday pursued Deputy United States Marshal Ballard through the streets. The police told him they could not protect him and that he had better leave town. He saved himself by dodging into a store. To-day a committee went from Norfolk to Richmond for the avowed purpose of giving United States Marshal Hughes a ducking. He learned their hostility by the courage with which he sought to prevent fraud and intimidation through deputy marshals. In many places Democratic mobs drove the marshals away from the polls. There is not a claim on the part of any Democrat that a single voter was prevented by the United States Marshals from voting. The Democrats held jubilee meetings last night. It was a scene of mad joy, and as bonfires enough could not be obtained to satisfy the crowd, a lumber yard was fired.

The speeches were intemperate to the point of incoherence. One speaker said: "The South is now in control of the Government again, and will be reimbursed for the losses." This was the most wildly cheered utterance of the night. It struck the key-note of Southern expectation and hope. To-day, in Richmond, Democrats have been exceedingly abusive at every appearance of Marshal Hughes and his deputies. The reorganized Supreme Court they expect to annul the war amendments, and one Democrat said to-day: "We will not have to waitlong even if we don't reorganize the Court, as four of the present Judges will retire next year and their places will be filled by Democrats, and it can be overhauled from the start."

The Democrats are not complaining so much of the New York Associated Press reports which they assume so strongly indicate Governor Cleveland's favor that a gain of 220 votes for Blaine is accompanied by the gratifying result that it would produce no change in the electoral vote of the State.

The Democrats are not complaining so much of the New York Associated Press reports which they assume so strongly indicate Governor Cleveland's favor that a gain of 220 votes for Blaine is accompanied by the gratifying result that it would produce no change in the electoral vote of the State.

New York's Vote.

SLIGHT GAINS FOR BLAINE IN ALBANY COUNTY—LEADING DEMOCRATS IGNORING CLEVELAND.

[Special Despatch to the Boston Journal.]

ALBANY, Nov. 12. The official count seems to proceed slowly throughout the State. Eleven counties thus far canvassed the changes do not vary much from the Democratic claim of 1,200 for Cleveland. It was not expected that these early canvassed counties would show any variation, but their returns do not bound from the ends which may and probably will consider the substantial contest in this way to add about votes for Blaine. It is evident that the work in New York City will be the longest continued and of the most interest. In Albany county there are eight votes for Blaine. The Democratic scheme of disfranchising the Seventeenth Ward, that gave Blaine 288 votes, did not work, for the refusal of the returns by the Republican County Treasurer and Democratic County Clerk were to be counted in. It is noticed that the Democrats of a national reputation have stalked upon Governor Cleveland since his alleged election. In the first place the Democrats have no real confidence that their plurality, now about 1,000 as they claim in the State, will stand the official count. The fact that they send Cleveland and consult with Tilden shows that they regard the former as a mere figurehead who can run for the Presidency because he had carried New York. There is on the part of all the Democrats a feeling of extreme doubt as to the outcome of this thing.

AMUSEMENTS

Youth

The sale of seats for this play will open at the box office this morning "Youth" is great in scenic and realistic effects Of this drama the Boston Gazette says

The act with the huge troop ship, the military band, fife and drum corps, and the red-coated soldiers marching aboard for their battle-field destination is both vivid and stirring The fight in the intrenchments is uncommonly realistic and exciting and is by far the best thing in its kind we have ever witnessed The prison yard is remarkably complete in its attention to details in respect to the convicts' uniforms, with the broad arrow stamped over them, the prisoners at work, and the picture it affords of jail routine The scenes depicting Deerlby church in summer and winter are exceptionally artistic, especially the last as seen by night A pretty view of the Thames, in which the whole scene moves, is both ingenious and effective

Rev. F E Shaw and family left for Machias last Wednesday It is understood that Mr Shaw is to preach in Brewer and Orrington The Society at East Machias is left without a pastor

Mattard's Escape.

Mr. Mattard of the Indian civil service was a very susceptible little man, but he was generally a heart broken widower. Miss Mattard had declined his offer of marriage. His affection for that young lady was no chemical affinity, and he had put off proposing to her till almost the last moment before his return to India from sheer trepidation and anxiety as to the issue of his courtship. The answer he received was so unmistakable that it left him no hope, and he shortly found himself in despair.

He went to spend the remainder of his leave at Southsea, where he made the acquaintance of a Colonel Creep, who had three daughters. It would be unjust to say that Mr. Mattard consoled himself for his disappointment in the society of these damsels, but he certainly paid them considerable attention. The fact was that he was constitutionally addicted to mild flirtations, though it was chiefly owing to diplomacy and wounded pride that he expected himself to face actually new friends.

But in these serious functions, of course, he would never have escaped an unengaged man from the accomplished blandishments of the Misses Creep. What might have happened but for Mr. Mattard's departure from England there is no knowing, for though his acquaintance with Colonel Creep's daughters was comparatively slight, he never-the-less carried away with him to India the vision of the prettiest and loveliest of the three.

Now the portrait of a pretty girl is rather a dangerous possession for a jilted lover, at least if report of what is inclined to dress and pose in mufti be correct. He had locked up and sealed his pictures in consular bags and so sparing to India, with the object of this idealized affections, and his feelings seldom weighed a good deal upon him during the voyage. It is common for the ship passengers to board the ship several delightfully uninteresting, and Mr. Mattard soon found himself in an engagement.

He had nothing, therefore, to distract his thoughts, which were centered on Miss Maunsarling and his own unhappiness, except the post art of Miss Annie Creep. He found himself gazing upon it rather sentimentally in the leisure moments, and there is no denying that he possessed a pretty likeness of the original. He began to compare Miss Creep with that of the original, and the up-to-date specimen's arrival in India. After some weeks of melancholy dejection he suddenly freed up and wrote to Miss Creep, with a proposal of marriage.

When he had done so, he felt like a man in mid-ocean who has thrown a letter into a bottle and committed it to the waves. He had a couple of years' leave due to him, and he had resolved to spend it in England, but he had not the slightest idea what sort of reception he would meet with. Miss Creep's reply, if she guessed intuitively that his second venture would be more successful than the first, and sufficiently for the return mail came to her accepting his offer. Three years afterwards there still remained Miss Annie Creep's answer, that surprised Mr. Mattard, considering that the young lady had certainly done her best to make herself agreeable to him at Southsea.

She professed astonishment that the object of her affections should have taken the shady step of going out four years before to England by his attentions. However, a little coyness is not unbecoming in pretty girls, and Mr. Mattard, in the honeymoon, had to find with the tone of the letter. But the same point came a little later, when the troops, ready to accept Mattard's proposal, had embarked. Annie Creep then wrote to him declaring that she was going to London to keep the books at the office of a guard, and with charming naïveté, she owned that, after all, the silver and diamond articles, with which Mr. Mattard had overwhelmed her, were not to her taste. She preferred gold ornaments, and begged that he would not send her any more. Mr. Mattard, on receiving this letter, was inclined to think that Miss Annie Creep was a mercenary little minx, and he wrote a somewhat severe reply.

Miss Creep's elopement was a sudden affair, arising out of an old attachment, and it did not necessarily follow that she had never intended to carry out her engagement to marry him.
